BOSTON (AP) — Industrialist Bernard Goldfine was convicted in federal court today of criminal contempt for failure to comply with the court's order to produce records of one of his textile mills in a tax probe.

About the same time Judge Charles E. Wyanski Jr. was fitting his decision in Boston, the 67-year-old Goldfine was pleading innocent in Washington to a contempt of Congress indictment.

Goldfine's secretary, Miss Mildred Papernan, also was found guilty of criminal contempt in regard to the Strathmore Mills of Boston and the Northfield Mills of Northfield, Vt., two other Goldfine enterprises.

The Goldfine conviction was on books of the Lebanon Mills of Lebanon, N. H.

Goldfine was found innocent on complaints regarding the records.

Christmas Tree, School Is Out

TYPICAL SCENE in all local grade schools today is a Christmas tree with gifts being handed out. Each student gets a gift with a cost limit usually of 50 cents.

When its all over, school time out for the holidays. Regular classes will be resumed on Monday, January 5.

Oglesby Yule Play Given by Students

Children of Oglesby School presented a Christmas play, entitled "Christmas Windows," Thursday afternoon for the Dec. meeting of the PTA.

Every child in school took part in the play and Miss Glenda Hockabee, Janie and David Seale, Randy Byers and Mike McCorkle were guest participants. Margie Waddie was reader.

The First Grade under the direction of Mrs. Garland Medders sang "Christmas Toys," while live blocks wooden soldiers, a doll, a clown, Jack in the box and horse could be seen in the toy shop window.

The Second Grade with Mrs. Grady Williams directing, portrayed "Santa's Toy Shop." The Second Grade Chorus sang "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town" and the rhythm band also played.

The Third Grade under the direction of Mrs. Royce Weisenberger, danced the "Christmas Polka." The little girls danced in the foreground while the boys, obscured by a small snow covered Christmas tree, formed a background of dancing trees.

Mrs. James McFarly's Fourth Grade portrayed the Candy Sugar Window, featuring a dainty sugar plum tree, chocolate dog and calico cat. The verse speaking choir gave a choral reading "The Sugar Plum Tree" by Eugene Fields and the Sugar Plum fairy, the candy canes and pixies danced to the accompaniment of the Nut Cracker Suite by Tchaikovsky.

The Fifth Grade, Mrs. T. V. Messer directing, presented "The Music Store Window." The Fifth Grade chorus sang "Silver Bells" and "Listen to the Bells" with triangle and piano accompaniment.

The Sixth Grade, Miss Kathleen Broach, together gave the nativity scene in a church window and the Sixth Grade choir sang "In the Bleak Midwinter" and "We Would See Jesus." Mrs. Jack Brown was pianist for the entire play.

Appeals Court Won't Rule on Divorce

HOPE (AP) — The Home Arkansas court is not going to decide whether Herbie Bergman and Robert Rosellini can have an annulment before February.

The court held a closed hearing today on the state prosecutor's appeal against the annulment granted by the Rome district court last July. Another hearing was scheduled for Feb. 3.

The state prosecutor contends that the district court had no jurisdiction or authority to annul the Mexican proxy marriage. Rosellini, with Mrs. Bergman, came to the Mexican proxy marriage ceremony on the ground that the marriage was not valid.

Feat Shows Russia Not So Far Ahead

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The feat of the Air Force in placing the Atlas missile in orbit shows the Soviet Union is not so far ahead after all, and means we now have forged ahead, in the opinion of a Massachusetts Institute of Technology expert.

H. Guyford Stever, former chief scientist for the Air Force and now professor of aeronautical engineering at MIT, said today the early Soviet advance in satellites arose from their use of "military hardware."

He said the United States surpassed its military missile program from its space satellite program.

Launching a Spectacular Fireworks

By JACK KING

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (P) — Launching of the nation's Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile is the most spectacular fireworks display this famous rocket test center has to offer.

The rocket, 224,000 pounds of power coated with stainless steel, stood free of its service tower for more than an hour before the spectacular launching.

It turned crimson as the rays of the setting sun reflected off the missile case. Later it shone in the beams of powerful floodlights.

Then at 6:02 p.m., the countdown announcer shouted "Zero," and a brilliant flash of white flame shot from the tail of the "Big A."

There was a pause, and then the mighty rocket struggled aloft—slowly at first—with its three engines blazing. It began to accelerate atop a tapered tail of white flame.

The cape turned to daylight for the rocket around as the monster weapon soared. The thunder of its three-engine power package rocked the coastline.

The Atlas is unique as far as big rockets go in that the full power of the engines is built up on the ground.

After about 60 seconds, the Atlas—just a bright fireball now—curved high in the sky and droned toward the east.

Because conditions were perfect, the Atlas was in sight for about seven minutes before it finally faded out like a fiery meteor.

Only 35 Men Knew About Launching

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Only 35 men knew that an Atlas missile would be shot into orbit until three hours before the spectacular launching.

"We called the 35 members of The Club," said B. G. MacNabb, a fiery Scot who is operations manager.

"There are 840 line men working for Convair at the Cape and only three of them knew about the satellite launching—even after the final bulletin was pressed and the missile was launched," MacNabb said.

Among those who had to receive the advance word was the range safety officer, whose duty is to destroy the missile if it strays off course. Crewmen manning tracking stations for tracking the missile had to be notified three hours in advance.

One of the important operations of a regular Atlas shot is the impact prediction chart at central control. It tells where the missile will land.

Personnel in central control were informed when one unidentified crewman stood in front of the chart and blocked the view of observers at a critical moment. It was all part of the act.

Wells Declares He Abhors All Kinds Politics

By CLIFTON WELLS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — "I abhor politics," says John F. Wells, an Arkansas politician.

Wells, publisher of a Little Rock weekly newspaper, was thrust onto the national political stage when he contested the election of Dr. Dale Alford in Arkansas' fifth Congressional District.

As a result of Wells' investigation and testimony, the House Campaign Expenditures Committee recommended 3-2 that Alford be denied a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives pending an investigation of the election.

Alford, a staunch segregationist, conducted a last minute, whirlwind campaign as a write-in candidate to unseat veteran Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark), a moderate on the racial issue. On the basis of original returns, Alford won by about 1,200 votes.

Wells charged that the Alford campaign and election was fraught with irregularities, fraud and conspiracy. He singled out Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus as an alleged conspirator to turn out Hays, the Democratic nominee. Faubus has denied the accusation.

Informing the public has been Wells' goal most of his 56 years. A soft-spoken man with a reporter's natural tendency to remain in the background, he began his career as $7.50 a week newspaper reporter in Little Rock, his home town. He won honorable mention on the Pulitzer Prize list in 1932 for a series of articles exposing graft in public office.

When he quit the daily field in 1936, the staff of Little Rock's Arkansas Gazette wrote of their departing city editor: "He was hit by a small but vicious insect known as the Bogus Politician."

Wells served in the administration of the late Carl E. Bailey, who was Arkansas' governor from 1937 to 1941.

He was left to his own devices after Bailey was defeated in a third term bid.

"Still a newspaperman at heart," he scraped together enough money to buy a used newspaper press and went into the printing business.

He launched his weekly Arkansas Recorder a few years later. Some called the Recorder a political newspaper. Wells said it was a "government news digest."

"A lot of people think I like politics. I definitely believe that government is the big challenge."

"I think politics is a necessary evil."

The Recorder's purpose, he continued, was to report state government news in depth—something he feels the dailies failed to do. By policy the Recorder avoids interviews with political officeholders; its stories, instead, rely on public records.

The paper—with a paid circulation of approximately 4,000—is a sounding board for Wells.

His pointed editorials have lashed friend and foe alike and generally take the stand of the southern conservative.

In recent years his main target for criticism has been Gov. Faubus.

Wells has denounced the U.S. Supreme Court's desegregation decision, while decrying Faubus' handling of the Little Rock school situation.

A friend who felt the sting of Wells' editorial bite was Hays himself.

Despite their close relationship, Wells Recorder pointed an accusing finger at the congressman for the latter's racial moderation.

But Wells doesn't feel he is fighting Hays' battle, or against Alford.

"It should be Wells vs. Faubus," he said.

The strong views of the Recorder seldom have proved financially profitable for Wells, who pushes himself at a furious pace through 12 to 14-hour work days.

He admits it has cost him advertisers and subscribers and, possibly, customers for his printing presses.

But then, the life of a politician who has never aspired to an elective office himself is not the simplest life.

Navy to Close Shumaker Depot

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy announced yesterday plans to close the Naval Ammunition Depot at Shumaker, near Camden, Ark.

The Arkansas installation was listed among 30 projected closings announced by the Navy. The cutback was described as attempt to balance shore establishments with the reduction in the size of the Navy's operating forces.

The Shumaker depot would be closed by June 30, 1964. A total of 440 civilian jobs would be eliminated.

Earlier this week, the Army announced that it intended to shut down Fort Clifton, Ark., as an economy move.

Poles Plead for Cardinal to Stay

ROME (AP) — Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski left for Warsaw today as scores of Poles in exile from communism shouted "Don't go back! You'll never be able to leave again!"

The Roman Catholic primate of Poland came to Rome two months ago for the conclave which elected Pope John XXIII to succeed Pius XII.

At the railroad station today anti-Communist Poles pressed against the prelate, clutching at his robes and shouting.

Cardinal Wyszynski was under house arrest in Poland during the 1953 conspiracy, at which he became a cardinal. After World War II, he was released and returned to Poland in 1955.

Yerger Helps Plan Council State Program

The Yerger student council sent two students early in December to the State Convention Planning Meeting, held at the Pine Street High School, Conway.

Yerger council representatives were Vera Williams, Vice President, who took part in the State Planning Section and Thomas Colborn, who took part in the Testing Section and ranked 4th in the top out of 19 participating schools.

The test was divided into six parts: (1) Current Affairs; (2) a one minute oral examination; (3) knowledge of student council work; (4) personality; (5) intelligence; (6) ability to carry himself well in a variety of situations.

The purposes of the meeting were to plan the State Council program and to select a student to send to the second meeting of the Williamsburg Student Purgeses, held in Williamsburg, Virginia, February 18-19, 1959. The student who made the highest score in a test supplied by Van Pool of the Washington, D. C. office was selected.

The council is grateful to Mr. and Mrs. George Spearman who carried local representatives to the meeting and to Mrs. M. Z. Glenn, council sponsor, for accompanying the students to the meeting.

New Rocket Is a Challenge to the Russians

WASHINGTON (P) — U. S. rocketmen hurled a four-ton satellite into orbit around the earth Thursday night in a giant stride toward outer space and man's mastery there.

The feat, dramatically announced by President Eisenhower at a White House diplomatic dinner, gave this country the biggest swinging around the planet. The known man-made object now swinging around the planet, the new Pullman car - size satellite dwarfs the 2,010 pounds of Russia's Sputnik III launched last May 15. It comes close to, or surpasses the bulk of the Soviet carrier rocket which went separately into orbit but plunged to its death Dec. 7.

But even more significant from the rocketmen's viewpoint are two other features:

The space traveler, dubbed "Operation Score," carries two-way communications which promise untold practical benefits for the future.

And it was pointed into its path by an internal guidance system, set course like a bullet—a long rather than being sent on a preset course like a bullet—a long step toward true space navigation.

Triumphant over the success of their project, American scientists quickly raised their space sights. They began talking about putting a man aboard another Atlas missile and sending it to Venus or Mars.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-ton American satellite flashed around the earth at 17,000-miles-an-hour today — a mighty challenge to Russian efforts to be first in mastery of space.

The new earth-girdling rocket opened up new vistas for putting a man into space and perhaps someday reaching far away Venus and Mars. Men who built the satellite, an Atlas missile of boxcar size, spoke about that.

No other man-made device now in the heavens can compare in size with the satellite launched Thursday night from Cape Canaveral, Fla. The satellite, 55 feet long and 10 feet in diameter, weighs 3,700 to 3,800 pounds. Its weight when it took off, with a heavy fuel load, was about 244,000 pounds.

Russia's 1½-ton Sputnik III, launched last May and still going, is a cone about 5 feet long and 5 feet in diameter at the base. Russia has said it weighs 2,000 pounds including 2,300 pounds of instruments.

This would be a much larger payload of instruments than the Atlas carries — about 150 pounds. Moreover, Russia may have put more total weight into the reaches of space last spring in launching Sputnik III. The rocket stage which propelled the Sputnik proper, and followed it in orbit to ramming before plunging back and burning up in the earth's atmosphere, is a guess that the combined weight of Sputnik III and the rocket stage might have been 10,000 pounds. That compares with the 3,700 or 3,800 pounds for the Atlas.

Scientists here insist there is a difference, however, because the Atlas satellite is all in one unit, whereas the Sputnik that went into orbit was about 2,000 pounds.

These scientists say that the greater size of the Atlas carries an advantage, as instruments are spread throughout it and the greater length and diameter also make it a better reflector for instruments used in tracking.

In some Pentagon quarters there was a belief that the total weight fired into the air by Russia in May, and the rocket thrust used to get it there, were about equal.

South Should See Satellite Tonight

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—The Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory says a satellite of the highly elliptical orbit should be visible over the southern parts of the United States tonight.

The Smithsonian said that because of the angle at which it was launched the satellite would travel north almost as far as Cape Hatteras.

John White, observatory public information officer, said the satellite should be much brighter than any previous satellite because of its low point of about 115 miles.

He said it should be clearly visible to the naked eye, looking like a fast moving bright star.

TV Westerns Will Survive All Critics

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—A while ago we reported the disenchantment of seven past and present prominent television dramatists with the medium. They expressed it to producer David Susskind in a TV interview.

There comes now an eloquent reply to their views in a letter to this department from Frederick Hazell Evans, a fine craftsman of entertaining fiction and the story editor and major script contributor to the TV series The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp. Brennan writes in part:

"Despite the noble disclaimer of (the seven writers) that they abhor proselytizing for a minority cause or trying to reform the cultural taste of 180 million Americans, these things are precisely what they are trying to do."

"Why? TV is a medium of mass entertainment. Sponsors, advertising agencies and TV producers have no obligation to uplift the cultural standards of the American people by means of propaganda disguised as social criticism, satire, 'worthwhile drama' or other intellectual snobberies."

"TV writers who feel that they have a 'message' can write for special audiences by way of books, the theater, highbrow magazines, or even a few movie producers. TV is a medium of entertainment and public information."

"In actual practice, TV has done very well when it comes to the freedom of speech and expression of opinion. A mass medium which allows Oscar Levant, Arthur Godfrey, Edward R. Murrow, Chet Huntley, the Rev. O. L. Jaggars and Bishop Pike to have their say cannot be accused of strict censorship."

"Comedians, politicians and college professors are allowed a wide latitude—usually on the somewhat dubious reasoning that they may provide entertainment."

"Once TV is persuaded that it should be a propaganda medium for cultural uplift, we are in for serious trouble. Who is to say what is cultural? One man's culture is another man's boredom. And who will decide what is uplifting? The Broadway stage? Mr. Padley Chayefsky or Mr. Tad Mosely?"

"Really did this thing, Mercer. You critics may be tired of Westerns. But what if you were forced to watch a daily programming of intellectual snob dramas which dealt with the Negro problem, the Jewish problem, the Catholic problem, the Protestant problem, and the adjustment of frustrated longshoremen to the pansy gardens of beatnik ballet?"

"Stay in there slugging, Mercer! Happy to have you in the ring any time, Brennan."

That night Hope lay dreaming under the flowing scent of pine with which the cold, the crystal air was steeped. Waking, she did not know she had slept, nor dreamed. In the split second before consciousness fully returned she felt as if she were on the verge of some tremendous discovery; if she could hold, and examine it, she would know the secrets of the universe. And then as she woke she heard herself speaking, the bemused voice saying, "Not enough love, not enough."

"Darling," said Adam. His arm was stretched across the narrow space between his hand on her shoulder. "You're talking in your sleep."

She asked drowsily, "What did I say?" for she had already forgotten.

"I didn't hear. Go back to sleep. We have to make an early start."

Boy was full grown, if not sedate, when, shortly after the New Year, Hope made an appointment with her doctor. She did not tell Adam this nor Marly, with whom she was lunching that day.

However inwardly preoccupied, it was impossible not to consider the change in Marly. It had been gradual, not a blossoming, open, but a steady, slow growth, an almost imperceptible flowering. She was as thin as ever—thin, if possible—but she wore her happiness with sterner, quiet dignity.

They talked of many things but mainly of the old house. Marly had bought in the country. Marly said, "You'll have to help me. Hope, I don't know much about antiquities." She laughed.

"I'll be taken by every dealer in and out of town," said Marly.

"The house was being restored. It was small, but big enough to contain them and a couple of guests."

Marly also had married. He had always been during Hope and Adam's knowledge of him, a quiet, unexcitable, even charming, and not superficial. He had now definitely matured.

When they returned from that first visit, Adam had spoken of the marriage. He said, "Adam, I was right. Marly's been here long enough. That's a good marriage, if I ever saw one."

"The 10 years aren't up, not by

NEW YORK (AP)—Growing concern over the 10-day-old doctors' strike has stopped publication of New York's major newspapers was voiced today by sports promoters and officials in this news-hungry metropolis.

They blamed dwindling attendances on the shutdown.

Stepped-up sports coverage by radio and television stations apparently has been of little help and each sport, except for the Cleveland-New York professional game, has been hit in varying degrees.

A Madison Square Garden official estimated the loss in college and pro basketball attendance at 25 per cent.

Murray Goodman, publicity director of the International Boxing Club, which is promoting tonight's Nino Valdes vs. Ray Mancini fight in the Garden, pointed out, "It's even going to affect the television audience. Without the daily TV listings, some people won't know that there'll be a fight to look at."

He said they were going to run a couple of thousand dollars behind what they would have under ordinary circumstances.

Mrs. Fay R. Hays of Oklahoma spent the weekend with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Ed Hays, Jr. and son, Dallas of Hope spent several days at parents' Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Daniel.

THREE FACES OF LOVE by FAITH BALDWIN

Chapter XVI

THREE FACES OF LOVE by FAITH BALDWIN

THE STORY: Hope and Adam have been married for more than 10 years. Around them have been successful and unsuccessful marriages. Hope believes that in some ways here is successful, yet it lacks many things.

Chapter XV

Chapter XVI

Hope shivered, looking about the big doctor's waiting room, and for no good reason as it was warm. It was also big, the furniture solid.

There were other women waiting with Hope, some were middle-aged and looked nervous, thin or fat; one was quite old; the rest were young or almost young, and obviously pregnant. With these there were escorts, women who looked like their mothers or best friends.

One by one, they vanished as the doctor opened the door, easy and relaxed and crooked a finger; he was a tall man, and informal. He smiled at Hope when he saw her there. "Well, hello," he said.

When her turn came she followed him into his office and sat down by a big glass-topped desk. There were photographs on it, too, but the walls were dark with books. The doctor's nurse whisked in, spoke to Hope by name, whisked out again.

"How in the world can she keep us straight?" Hope asked. "She hasn't seen me for years."

"It's a secret," answered the doctor, "and known only to our Miss T." He had always called his office nurse Miss T. Hope remembered. He looked up, smiling. "Yes, a long time," he said, "must be over 10 years."

"That's right," Hope added quickly. "I know this is probably insane, but I think I'm pregnant again."

Her eyes were distended with apprehension; he noticed that, and the way she kept folding and unfolding her hands.

He nodded and opened the folder which Miss T. had put on his desk. He leafed over the pages, and looked up thoughtfully. "You shouldn't be, you know," he said, "according to the records"—he tapped the folder—"nor according to me and, as you know," he added, laughing, "I am infallible!"

Hope said, "Yes, So I couldn't believe it. You told me—in effect—never."

"Medically speaking," he agreed, "this could be something of a miracle. Suppose we find out? There are, by now, new and very explicit tests."

He pressed a button, and Miss T. arrived, small, mobile, and friendly. She took Hope to the examining room and told three amusing stories while Hope undressed.

When Hope emerged, after dressing, powdering her nose, and reddening her lips, she went once more to the office and sat once more by the desk. The doctor said, "As I told you back in the examining room—yes, but the tests will be confirmation."

She said, "But I don't—that if I mean—She stopped. She looked at him and said candidly, 'I'm scared.'"

"You needn't be. We'll look after you. You'll sail right through your pregnancy and deliver a good, strong baby. You'll be all right. The trouble has corrected itself without the surgical interference which, if you remember, I suggested."

"I remember. But Adam said, 'No.'"

"I remember that, too. He was quite violent about it." The doctor shook his head. "Have a cigarette?" He said, "If I had time I'd write a paper on this. Maybe I shall anyway."

Hope said, "I'm not frightened the way you think." She made a curious gesture with her hands. "I haven't told Adam yet and he won't want me to have the baby; he won't let me have it."

"Nonsense," said her doctor equably. "Let me talk to him."

Hope went home and for a while sat alone before Adam returned. They hadn't replaced Mrs. Riggs yet; the cleaning woman came extra days.

Adam came home. He had been busy, he had had a complaining sort of day, client-wise. He was tired. Dinner was almost ready, so he wandered into the kitchen, smacked Hope's bottom, and pulled her hair. He asked, "What's cooking?" and she told him. He said that was fine except he'd had it for lunch.

At the table, "What happened today, if anything?" he asked. "She told him that too, or most of it; she'd lunched with Marly, she'd done an errand."

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Nothing's the matter," she said, her heart pounding. "What makes you think so? When I was doing my face tonight, I thought, 'How lucky Adam is!'"

"I don't mean how you look. You look elegant. But there is something—" he regarded her anxiously. "Sure your head doesn't ache? This new virus or whatever—that's such a convenient term—seems to hit suddenly. One minute you feel fine and the next you're flat on your back. I sent Gloria home today after lunch."

Gloria was the receptionist. "There's nothing wrong, dope," said Hope. "I feel fine."

"Did something upset you?" Marly? No, not Marly. What did Helen's letter say?

"Lots. All happy as a clam. She could not tell him, she would not—not yet. There must be someone with whom she could talk first."

Not Helen—and besides, Helen wasn't available. Helen would say, anyway, "You're out of your mind—a baby at this late date?" Marly? Marly would be happy for her, she would think it wonderful, but Marly would mourn in her hidden; yet somehow so visible, heart, that she could not have a child for Hal.

There wasn't anyone, really. (To Be Continued)

THE population of Arkansas in the first U.S. census was 1,002. This was in 1810.

When Hope emerged, after dressing, powdering her nose, and reddening her lips, she went once more to the office and sat

once more by the desk. The doctor said, "As I told you back in the examining room—yes, but the tests will be confirmation."

She said, "But I don't—that if I mean—She stopped. She looked at him and said candidly, 'I'm scared.'"

"You needn't be. We'll look after you. You'll sail right through your pregnancy and deliver a good, strong baby. You'll be all right. The trouble has corrected itself without the surgical interference which, if you remember, I suggested."

"I remember. But Adam said, 'No.'"

"I remember that, too. He was quite violent about it." The doctor shook his head. "Have a cigarette?" He said, "If I had time I'd write a paper on this. Maybe I shall anyway."

Hope said, "I'm not frightened the way you think." She made a curious gesture with her hands. "I haven't told Adam yet and he won't want me to have the baby; he won't let me have it."

"Nonsense," said her doctor equably. "Let me talk to him."

Satisfied . . . or sluggish?

"Are you really satisfied with all conditions in your town today? Do you honestly believe they need no improving? That progress can be taken for granted? That industrial expansion and economic development, growth and prosperity just happen?"

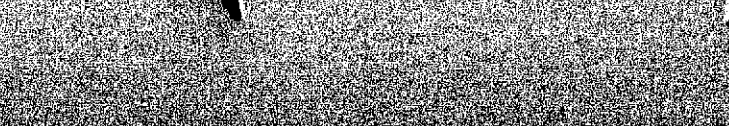

"Or is it perhaps a case of shrugging off responsibility with a 'Let George Do It'? Be honest with yourself, and reflect. Just who is George, in the final analysis?"

"There are—fortunately—many 'georges' in your town, and you as a business man benefit from their active participation in community projects. These are the business men and women who realize that each one of us is 'George.' That's why they associate themselves with the organization which coordinates their thinking and translates it into action—a practical application of the American concept."

"So . . . don't leave it all to the other 'Georges'! Join your local Chamber of Commerce and lend a hand."

"I'll be seeing you . . . 'George'!"

Junior Iris Garden Club Met Monday, December 8.

The Junior Iris Garden Club met on Dec. 8 in the Sixth Grade room with Wayne Moses, president, presiding. Brenda Smith, secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting and Mrs. Coy Breeding, club sponsor, introduced Mrs. A. A. Albritton from the Senior Iris Club.

Mrs. Albritton had prepared a small "do-it-yourself" package containing all the material necessary for making a miniature Christmas corsage. With the help of Mrs. Breeding and Mrs. Albritton the children assembled little corsages of evergreen and berries.

At the close of the meeting the hostesses served Christmas candies. There were 30 members present.

Mrs. Kenneth Witt Hostess to Circle Number 5. Circle No. 5 of the WSCS of the First Methodist Church met in the home of Mrs. Kenneth Witt for their annual Christmas party on Dec. 15, at 7:30 p. m.

The scene was one of festivity and beautifully decorated pine tree, mantle and tables. The 18 guests seated themselves around the fireplace and Mrs. Ed Aslin in the absence of the chairman, gave the opening prayer and made announcements. She read a lovely piece about giving at Christmas time and Mrs. Vic Henderson brought a new writing of the always beautiful Christmas story, "Good News of Great Joy."

The Christmas missionary offering was collected and gifts exchanged after which the most original was voted and the prize of a large cake baked by Mrs. Aslin was divided and given to two winners, Mrs. Lagrone Williams and Mrs. Lyle McMahon.

No games were played in order to give the members an opportunity to visit each other. The Circle received a call from Mrs. Cordelia Tillery, a past chairman wishing them a Merry Christmas.

The guests served themselves from a table centered with a spherical arrangement of turquoise snow and crystal basket of bright bulbs and laden with delicious sandwiches, nuts, candy canes with red bows, delightfully decorated cookies and coffee.

In Washington Goldfine is accused of flouting Congress by refusing to tell House investigators enough about his financial dealings.

In the Washington hearing it was brought out Goldfine had made gifts to former presidential aide Sherman Adams and other public officials. Adams denied there was any wrongdoing in the matter. He subsequently resigned his White House post.

Goldfine stepped forward briskly today when his name was called in District Court in the nation's capital. He pleaded "not guilty" in a firm voice. Judge John J. Sirica set his trial for March 10.

Goldfine had little to say to reporters and was unaware at the time of the court action in Boston. In the Boston decision, Judge Wyzanski said he will impose sen-

Moon Can Be Seen 3 Times Tonight

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—The big Atlas rocket satellite may make three passages visible over southern United States tonight, the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory reported today.

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, associate director, said the 14th, 15th and 16th orbits around the world since its Cape Canaveral launching Thursday should be visible in states.

"Dr. Hynek said 'a very rough' timetable would indicate that the 14th passage would come into visibility about 5:30 p. m. EST" over Mississippi, traveling in a southeasterly direction over Alabama, Georgia and northern Florida.

Since the rocket will be at its perigee, or low point, of about 115 miles above the earth, it would not be visible very far north.

Dr. John Witte, information officer, said there's a slight possibility that the rocket might be seen as far north as Washington, D.C.—very low on the southern horizon.

Since the Atlas was launched at an angle of 32 degrees to the equator it will never cross above a line drawn below the California-Mexican border to central Texas and to Savannah, Ga.

In all instances, the satellite would be observed traveling in a generally westerly direction. Scientists said it should appear extremely bright, reflecting the rays of the sun in the evening twilight.

The second visible passage tonight and the 15th circuit since launching should begin about 7:10 p. m. EST, in western Texas, cross southern Texas, pass south of Louisiana and over the Gulf of Mexico.

The third visible passage tonight, it is estimated, would begin about 8:50 p. m. EST, coming out from over the Pacific Ocean, passing just below southern California, and crossing Mexico fairly close to Mexico City.

The scientists assume that with the low point of the satellite's orbit occurring in the Northern Hemisphere it should not be visible for more than 400 or 500 miles to the north of its overhead passage.

All moonwatch teams are being alerted.

Applications for Arkansas Stations

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Communications Commission yesterday received an application from Independent Radio, Inc., of North Little Rock, Arkansas for a new standard station at DeWitt, Ark., on 1470 kilocycles, 500 watts, daytime.

Monday.

BOSTON (AP)—Industrialist Bernard Goldfine was convicted of criminal contempt today for failure to comply with a federal court order to produce books of the Lebandale Mills, Lebanon, N. H., in connection with a probe of his tax affairs.

U.S. Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. handed down the decision. The 67-year-old Goldfine was acquitted on two counts regarding books of Lebandale Mills of Lebanon, N. H., and George Moffett and Sons Co., of Plymouth, Mass. Goldfine's secretary, Miss Mildred Paperman, was convicted of criminal contempt in connection with records of the Sutherland Mills of Boston and the Northfield Mills of Northfield, Vt.

the same or perhaps slightly more than the weight and thrust the Air Force disclosed for its Atlas project.

These sources believe the Sputnik vehicle, with all motors and fuel, probably weighed about 250,000 pounds at launching time. This may have required slightly more rocket engine thrust than the 600,000 pounds of thrust announced for the Atlas.

The Atlas is traveling west to east, at altitudes ranging from 115 to 625 miles.

The men who built the Atlas talked about pulling a man aboard another, one some time and sending it to Venus or Mars.

L. R. Board Selects a Superintendent

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Little Rock School Board last night picked Terrell E. Powell as the new Little Rock school superintendent.

Powell succeeds Virgil Blossom, whose contract was bought up by a former board before it resigned in November as a result of the integration controversy.

He has been principal of the now-closed Hall High School. Powell, a teacher and administrator since 1924, will get $800 a month as superintendent. That is $200 a month more than he has been getting as principal of Hall but $300 a month less than Blossom was getting.

In other discussion, school board member Ted L. Lamb asked Dr. Carey Stabler, president of Little Rock University, to prepare a report on the merits of the university having its own board.

In addition to administering Little Rock's public school, the board members serve as trustees for the university, formerly Little Rock Junior College.

This arrangement was specified under the will of the late Gov. George W. Donaghey, who set up the Donaghey Foundation to provide financial aid to the school.

An attempt a few years ago to place the school under a separate

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

The merry whirl of the holiday basketball tournaments starts to spin in full swing tonight.

Four college festivals in the South launch this fantastic period that will stretch past New Years.

The University of Kentucky Invitational will take place at Lexington. Blue Grass Festival begins at Louisville. The Birmingham Classic gets underway at Birmingham, Ala., and the Citadel Invitational at Charleston, S. C. First round games in all four tournaments will be played tonight. The finals will be decided Saturday night.

Tenth ranked North Carolina (3-0) faces Notre Dame (1-3) in the first game of the third annual Blue Grass Festival. Northwest (3-0), listed sixth nationally, goes against host Louisville (4-2) in the afterpiece.

Pairing for the sixth annual Birmingham Classic are 13th ranked Auburn (3-0) vs. Wyoming (2-3) and Alabama (3-2) vs. Texas A&M (4-0).

The Citadel (3-1) is the host in its first invitational and meets Georgia (3-1) in the second game. Miami, Fla., (4-2) clashes with Florida State (3-3) in the opener.

The fifth annual Quantico Marines Christmas Invitational Tournament ended Thursday night with host Quantico capturing the championship for the fourth time. The Marines defeated American University of Washington, D. C. 69-63. Tennessee, No. 5, was the only

Matter of FACT

The average (median) income for persons with income in 1956 was $2,432. A 1957 survey indicated a new record level of $3,609 for the average income of men, a gain of about $250 over the previous year. Among women, the average income in 1956 was $1,146, little changed from that of the preceding four years. Since the close of World War II, the average income of men has doubled, while that of women increased only 27 per cent.

Yerger Boys, Girls Play Friday Night

The Yerger Tigers and Tigerettes will play host to the Lewisville Tigers at Harris Gym Friday night. The Tigers are coming along well during this early season.

The Tigers last Tuesday night split a twin bill with Lewisville. Senior girls dropped theirs 21-16 with Gracie Harris high with 10 points. The Senior boys eased through their game after a very shaky first quarter. They downed Lewisville 40-29 with Douglas Williamson hitting for 15 points and B. Ross getting 12.

A rematch of these teams will be tonight at Yerger Gym with the first game starting at 8:00.

College Grid Scores Lower Than Usual

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

College football in 1957 experienced its lowest scoring season in a decade. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. statistics for the 1958 season, still incomplete, indicate that the over-all average was just about the same as it was a year ago. Possibly there was a year ago. Possibly there was a very slight drop.

The reason Coaches have been devoting more time to defense than they did a few years ago; they have taught defenses to outmaneuver the blockers and the results naturally are good.

That's the consensus of nearly 200 press box experts replying to the Associated Press post-season football questionnaire.

Even though the principal trend noted this year by the same sports writers and broadcasters was a swing toward more varied, imaginative and wide open offenses, they considered the defenses strong enough to control most of the games.

In one way or another, about half the experts said that more emphasis on defensive play by the coaches and the resulting improvement of the players had caused the scoring decline in recent seasons. Only a few blamed conservatism and the ball-control offense.

About 33 others pointed specifically to the T and split-T formations, whose popularity seems to have declined this year. The defenses have learned to stop plays from those formations, and although coaches have tried new or different attacks, they haven't yet come up with a style that can't be stopped.

Defensive tactics are vastly improved over those of just a few years ago.

A quarterback no longer can call a play in the huddle to penetrate a certain defensive line and expect it to gain. He has to look again and often change when the teams line up.

About a dozen writers and broadcasters mentioned that there's less concentration of total ball talent on a few big teams and that schedules offer few soft touches. The result is that there's little opportunity to run up big scores.

Michigan Group Sets Swim Record

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An Ann Arbor high school swimmer, sponsored by a national high school swimming record, Thursday won the 200-yard medley relay in the 200-yard medley relay.

Slower than Bobby Clark, Jim G. Smith and Owen Kline, Clark dropped better than a second off the old mark with a time of 1:47.4.

The old clocking of 1:48.3, a last year, was held jointly by Bartie Creek and Groose Point high schools.

Ann Arbor Coach Paul Clifford said he would apply to the NCAA for certification of the new mark.

The record fell at Ann Arbor as he was being Lincoln Park and Auburn in a triangular meet.

New Church Educational Bld.

GARRETT MEMORIAL Baptist Church has completed its new educational building pictured above. The 20-room structure cost $25,000.

The Garrett Memorial Missionary Baptist Church was constructed in 1914 for a Community Sunday School. Two years later, July 23, 1916, the Rev. J. F. Queen led in the organization of a Missionary Baptist Church at this location.

Eight charter members were received and they elected the Rev.
Mrs. Queen as their first pastor.
Mrs. Hance Miller, one of the charter members, is still a member. Two days after organizing the church voted to be called the Second Baptist Church. The church prospered and in less than a year the membership reached 25.

In 1921 additional lots adjoining the church were secured. With this acquisition, church property was valued at $750.00. The name Garrett Memorial Baptist was adopted in 1925.

Up until 1925 affiliation was with the Southern Convention Association. Since then local affiliation has been with the United Missionary Baptist Association, and the State and National North American Baptist Association.

supported by monthly contributions in which 10 per cent of the offering is divided among these fields. Garrett Memorial has truly grown and progressed during these few short years.

A special message for people who plan to buy a '59 car

By now you've had a chance to look over all the 1959 models. They're all on the market now, bright and shiny and dazzling as only new cars can be.

Now is the time to ask yourself the question, "Which car should I buy? Which car will give me the most value, the most satisfaction for my money?"

What do you want in a car?

We don't expect to sell everyone in 1959.
We know that some people will end up buying small cars, and some, foreign imports.
We accept the fact that a few will buy high-performance sports cars, and that others, because of their position, cars that cost far more than any Dodge. That's fine. We don't expect to sell them all.

But if you're in the market for a smart-looking, solidly built, full-sized car that's reasonably priced and that performs beautifully, a car designed for your comfort and convenience that you can drive with pride anywhere
— WE ARE TALKING TO YOU.

Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery

Let's start with styling. How a car looks is an important consideration; no one buys a car they don't like. But styling, like beauty, is relative. What is not stuff to one person is cold potatoes to another. So we will only say this about Dodge styling: Our competitors obviously like it. We think that's quite a tribute.

Rumor: Some '59 cars are hard to get into

You'd think all cars would be about as easy to get into and out of, and as comfortable to sit in. After all, they all have doors and they all have seats. The fact is, there's a big difference—particularly this year.

Attention Station Wagon Buyers!
Dodge station wagons are terrific.
Too terrific for you to see except the Dodge Station Wagon Booklet.
Dodge Division, Box 1250, Detroit
81, Michigan.
P.S. Don't forget to watch
Lawrence Welk.

Frankly, some '59 cars are known to be a little difficult to get into, as well as out of.
This wasn't intentional, of course. In trying to design a car that was as low and modern as our Sweep-Ving Dodge, it just worked out that way.

This is not true of Dodge, because Dodge is designed around you. You get in easily and naturally, without banging your knee on the door post or the steering wheel. You sit on seats that give you wonderful support.
There are no high door sills to trip over.

Of course, we won't even mention the fact that the other '59 cars don't offer Swing-Out Swivel Seats. Oops!

Which do you want:
Push Buttons or a shift stick?

We know that a number of people like a lever-type automatic transmission. They've used them for years and they're satisfied. We have no quarrel with them.
But there's a lot of wisdom in what Alexander Pope says in his Essay on Criticism: "Be not the first by whom the new are tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

Push-button driving isn't new. This is the fourth year that Dodge has had it. We would guess that, conservatively, over two million owners have used it—and loved it.
So we're not going to try to sell you on the ease of push-button driving; we do hope you'll just give it a try.

You want a modern ride, don't you?

You can divide all the '59 cars into two groups. Those like Dodge that have torsion bars; and those that have coil springs. Now don't get us wrong. Coil springs are okay. They've been used on cars for years.
But that's just the trouble. When you buy a 1959 car, you want a 1959 ride to go with it. That's Torsion-Aire. It's the newest, finest, most advanced suspension system in the industry. (Pardon our enthusiasm.)

And remember this: You don't pay a penny extra for the extra comfort you get with Torsion-Aire. It's standard equipment.

Wouldn't you like to be pampered a little?

There's almost no end to the wonderful convenience features you can get in a '59 Dodge. Swing-Out Swivel Seats. (They're great!) Push-Button TorqueFlite transmission. Full-Time Power Steering. Outside mirrors that adjust from the inside.
Inside mirrors that adjust themselves electronically to banish glare. They're all available at extra cost—and well worth it.

A few words about quality, performance and price

These are things that are hard to measure.
What do you mean by quality? What constitutes good performance? What is a good buy? We would sum up our case for Dodge in this manner: It is a car that is well engineered and well built to give you years of driving satisfaction. It will more than match any other competitive car in the performance department. It is, we non-estly believe, an extremely good buy for the money.

Are we prejudiced?
You bet we are!

We'll admit we're prejudiced about our '59 Dodge. We think it's a great car. And if a new car is in your plans for 1959, we'd like the opportunity to convince you of this. How about giving us a chance to show you this Dodge, to point out its many exclusive advances, to hand over the keys so that you can drive it and draw your own conclusion. We're ready any time you are. Why not make it soon?
